

In the interest of a democratic and free society it is imperative that the FCC maintain it's longstanding policies against media monopolies. In today's electronic age, more than ever, people rely on media outlets to keep them informed on local and world events. If that news is diverted to flow through only a handful of outlets it will be at its best a regression from free-thought and democratic ideals and at its worst an endorsement for facsisct ideology by the United States Goverment.

I respectfully request that you head the call of the nation and keep media ownership from being ruled by corporate interests.

Sincerely,
Shane McAllen
